

Platform Makers Cannot Agree

Ku Klux Klan and League of Nations Planks Give Trouble to Democrats, Who May Carry Fight to Convention Floor—Practically Agree on Prohibition—The Tentative Platform.

Copyright, 1924, by International News Service.

New York, June 25.—The fate of the Democratic party in the 1924 campaign was virtually at stake today when an inner circle of 14 "mass minds" met to draft an official platform for submission to the national convention.

The platform conferees faced one of the bitterest factional fights in the history of the party over the adoption of Ku Klux Klan and League of Nations planks. All hopes of settling the issues peacefully in secret session were abandoned after the opposing factions formally served notice they would carry their fight to the convention floor if defeated in the committee deliberations.

Bryan Helping Draft Platform.

The actual drafting of the official platform was given over to the 14 party chieftains by the full platform committee. Their recommendation must first pass the test of the full committee before a final verdict is rendered by the convention itself.

The conferees were Homer S. Cummings, Connecticut, chairman; William Jennings Bryan, Florida; William H. O'Brien, Indiana; W. A. Ayres, Kansas; Senator David I. Walsh, Massachusetts; Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Nebraska; Senator Key Pittman, Nevada; Joseph A. Kello, New York; Newton D. Baker, Ohio; Senator Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma; and Philis J. Garrett, Tennessee, minority leader of the house.

A second collaborating sub-committee meeting jointly with the others included Senator William H. King, Utah, chairman; Charles H. Mayer, Kansas; and Alfred Lucking, Michigan.

Can't Agree on Klan Plank.

Settlement of the Klan issue was the biggest problem confronting the platform builders. One faction, led by followers of Governor Al Smith, of New York, Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, and George Brennan, political czar of Illinois, demanded a plank directly condemning the Ku Klux Klan by name and pledging the Democratic party to "oppose the activities of the Klan."

They declared they controlled sufficient votes to force an adoption of the anti-Klan plank in the convention itself.

Faced by opposition from the nominal leaders of the platform conference the anti-Klan forces served formal notice they would force the convention vote upon the issue unless the plank was written into the platform by the conferees.

The situation developed to fever heat at a long night session of the full committee and was climaxed by a verbal clash early this morning between anti-Klan spokesmen and Chairman Cummings. The session virtually broke up in a row with Cummings ruling the spokesmen "out of order."

Bryan Fears to Split Party.

Scores of party leaders, including Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, leader in the senate; Representative Garrett, the house leader; and William Jennings Bryan, opposed the direct naming of the Klan and urged adoption of a plank strongly upholding the constitutional right of religious liberty. They contended that adoption of a plank specifically condemning the Klan by name would split the Democratic party and inject new issues into the campaign so bitter as to overshadow the economic and Washington scandal issues upon which a November victory was predicted in the convention's keynote speech.

"Inner Circle" Opposes Condemnation.

As the conferees gathered for their session there was a general feeling that the anti-Klan plank would be rejected by the "inner circle," restored by the full committee and upheld by the convention.

Baker Demands League Endorsement.

A second platform fight of major proportions loomed over the League of Nations plank. A minority group led by Former Secretary of War Baker and Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, demanded an outright endorsement of American adherence to the League on the same conditions which led Democratic defeat in 1920.

A majority of the conferees and of the full committee as well, were opposed to this plank, favoring merely an endorsement of the League World Court while pushing the League issue into the background "until the proposal can be made non-partisan."

Facing almost certain defeat in the committee sessions, Baker and Glass announced they would force the convention itself to go publicly on record on the League issue. They planned to invoke the last recommendations of Woodrow Wilson, reaffirming his faith in the League, as a battle cry on the convention floor. Party leaders, who opposed the move, feared that such a fight might result in a convention stampede to the league, thus again overshadowing what they said was the inner defeat of 1920.

May Agree on Prohibition.

A minor conflict also developed over a prohibition enforcement plank, revolving around a proposal by the ultra-dry faction to specifically name the Eighteenth Amendment. A peaceful settlement was in prospect, although a close vote was expected.

The bitterness of the Klan and league fights offered an extraordinary contrast to the trend of opinion expressed by the conferees and platform committee members over every other issue before the convention. There was an almost unanimous sentiment over the kind of planks to adopt relating to economic, agricultural, railroad and labor issues.

Tentative Platform Planks.

The tentative platform is as follows:

League of Nations.

1. A decision that no effort will be made to enter United States into the League of Nations until the American people have become convinced that it is no alliance for war adherence and can be negotiated on a non-partisan basis, with a statement of willingness to accept the "verdict" of 1920.

Prohibition.

1. A declaration in favor of strict enforcement of all laws without direct reference to the prohibition law.

2. A demand for strict enforcement and a plea for "obedience in letter and spirit," of the Eighteenth Amendment, with a declaration to take the prohibition issue "out of party politics."

Woodrow Wilson.

With patriotic pride, the Democratic party again pays high tribute to Woodrow Wilson and points to the splendid achievements of the party under his leadership. In paying homage to its late leader, the party classes Wilson "among the immortals."

Comparison of Administrations.

The party declares the coming campaign will be decided on the dominant issues made by existing conditions. It promises to remedy these conditions, which are described in details and relate to high taxation, high tariffs, corruption in the government service and administrative waste.

Honesty in Government.

A strong plank scathingly denouncing the Republican administration for its corruption. It calls attention to scandals in the navy department, the department of justice, the interior department and the veterans' bureau with specific mention of Fall, Denby, Daugherty and Forbes. A general condemnation of waste and extravagance in all government departments.

World Court.

A declaration that the United States directly adhere to the permanent court of international justice as established under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Four Power Pact.

The four power pact will be criticized for leaving the United States weak in naval defense, "by stripping the country of its capital ships while giving Great Britain and Japan superior power in submarines, cruisers, air plane carriers and auxiliary ships."

Agriculture.

A declaration that agriculture suffered from loss of foreign markets due to the inactivity of the Republican administration in settling the reparations dispute, or in re-establishing the purchasing power of Europe, while blaming the Fordney-McCumber tariff law for compelling the farmer to pay exorbitant prices for manufactured articles, while selling in an impoverished domestic market. A direct pledge of the Democratic party to "revive and reopen the markets of Europe" with an extension of government aid to cooperative marketing and exportation. A promise to provide a more economical federal credit system and a pledge to readjust transportation costs by reducing freight rates on agricultural raw materials.

Railroads.

A declaration of belief in the "good intentions" of the sponsors of Government Sues 30 Oil Companies For Restraint

Effort to Be Made to Break Alleged Control of Standard Oil Over Gasoline and Oil Prices.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 25.—In a gigantic effort to break the alleged control of the Standard Oil Company over gasoline and oil prices in the United States, the federal government today charged 30 of the country's great oil companies with violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law and asked the district court at Chicago to enjoin them from further violations.

The suits were filed under the direction of Attorney General Harlan F. Stone, on the basis of an investigation conducted by the Federal trade commission.

The litigation thus started by the government is regarded by officials of the department of justice as among the most important that has been undertaken during the past quarter of a century.

Companies named in the bill include the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Standard of New Jersey, Standard of California, Standard of Kansas, Standard of Louisiana, Standard of New York, Standard of Ohio, the Texas Co., the American Refining Company, the Aetna Refining Company and twenty other great oil companies.

In explanation of the government's legal assault on the various Standard Oil Companies, which were dissolved several years ago by the United States court, the department of justice issued the following official statement:

"In bringing this suit Attorney General Stone charges that all these great companies have combined to control the production of gasoline by a pooling of their patent rights in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, named as the primary defendant in the conspiracy to organize and maintain the unlawful combination, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Standard Development Company, Texas Company and the gasoline Products Company.

"In substance, the petition filed by the attorney-general alleged that due to the increase demand for gasoline resulting from the great increase in the use of automobiles, manufacturers of gasoline now utilize processes for cracking gasoline which increases the yield from a given amount of stock from 50 to 100 per cent over the old methods of distillation. The process is described as the subjecting of the residue after distillation to high temperature and super atmospheric pressure thus effecting the decomposition of the molecules of the heavier hydrocarbon known as gas oil and so forth, into the molecules of the lighter hydrocarbons known as gasoline.

"The attorney-general charges that disclosures of this process was made in patents issued sixty years ago, and long since expired, and that while there now are no valid patents covering broadly the basic features of the process, the primary defendants have pooled a number of patents covering unimportant improvements relating thereto and are seeking to extort huge sums from the manufacturers of gasoline in the guise of royalties and by means of certain restrictive covenants contained in licensed agreements to restrain and monopolize the interstate and foreign commerce in so-called cracked gasoline and other commodities produced by the cracking process.

"The effect of the agreements, the attorney-general charges has been to pool a large number of patents and alleged patent rights relative to minor improvements in a long practiced art; to stop all parties to the plan from in any manner contesting the validity of said asserted patent rights; to burden the interstate and foreign trade and commerce in gasoline, kerosene and other commodities, by levying thereon heavy charges in the guise of royalties; and to secure to the defendant, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, a virtual monopoly of trade and commerce in gasoline in the fifteen states described in the agreement as the Indiana company's territory.

Later in the day Mrs. McSpirt appeared and paid the two fines, and Joseph was released. The team which he was driving when arrested had been cared for at a local livery stable. Mrs. McSpirt promised to take Joseph home and keep him there.

Says Department Must Approve Highway Plan

Supreme Court Justice Hasbrouck Grants Mandamus Writ To Compel State Highway Department's Approval Of Roads Designated By Supervisors For Improvement.

Supreme Court Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck today handed down a decision granting the application of County Attorney John W. Eckert for a mandamus against the state commissioner of highways to compel him to approve the action of the board of supervisors in designating what roads should be improved in Ulster county.

Under the Lowman act Ulster county has been building highways in various towns for several years. Under this act the state contributes $30 a mile for every mile constructed. The maximum amount received from the state in Ulster county is $55,440. This amount is appropriated provided the county authorities appropriate an equal amount. Since 1921 the county authorities have been making a sufficient appropriation to obtain this maximum amount from the state.

In 1921 the board of supervisors adopted a road map designating the number of roads in the county for improvement under the Lowman act, and each year since then the board has designated what roads would be improved during the ensuing year.

In 1923 the board of supervisors again appropriated $55,440 in order to obtain the maximum amount from the state, and at the meeting held on April 28 of this year the board appropriated an additional sum of $38,922.46. In addition to these amounts the county's share from the auto license fees was $39,197.54, which also goes toward highway building. Under the plan as adopted several years ago, a town has to pay 25 per cent of the cost of the improvement, and that amounted to $82,000 so that the board when it met April 28 had available the sum of $252,000 for road construction.

At the April meeting the board designated the various roads in the county for improvement this year. There were no roads designated in the towns of Kingston, Olive, Rochester or Saugerties.

The board of supervisors is required to certify its action to the state highway department for approval and the board did so. However, the commissioner, Mr. Brandt, sent a letter to the board refusing to approve the action taken by the board on the ground that the three towns that had Democratic supervisors had been omitted from the proposed road construction work this year.

The board then authorized County Attorney Eckert to bring mandamus proceedings to compel the commissioner to approve the action of the board. The mandamus proceedings were commenced by County Attorney Eckert and a hearing was held before Justice Hasbrouck on June 7, and were opposed by the state highway department. Justice Hasbrouck has just handed down a decision granting the application for the mandamus, and an order of mandamus will be issued directing the commissioner to approve the action of the board of supervisors.

Convention Gets Down To Business

Permanent Organization Effected By Democrats — Demonstration For Chairman Walsh Causes Rumor He May Be Dark Horse For Nomination—Delegates Swelter in Shirt Sleeves — Bryan With Platform Committee—Begin Nominations.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Madison Square Garden, New York, June 25.—The Democratic national convention in its second session today got down to the shirt sleeve stage.

The frock coated formality that marked the getaway on Tuesday was entirely lacking when the delegates assembled at 11 o'clock in the baking Garden to ratify the convention preliminaries and listen to another flood of oratory that must precede the real fight over platform and candidacies.

It was hot in the Garden—hotter than yesterday. The flags hung limp and motionless. The only vibrant breezes that floated about the huge place were from vigorously flapping fans that everybody carried. Coats came off by the hundreds, and in many cases collars as well. Linen and Palm Beach suits blossomed in place of yesterday's claw hammered regalia. The convention got off to its customary late start. The heat of the Garden was not very attractive, and they put off coming as long as possible.

Bryan Watching Platform Makers.

And too, there was a platform battle being waged in the Waldorf with the Klans and anti-Klans lighting it out before the drafting sub-committee. Some of the most notable figures of Democracy were missing from the floor when the gavel sounded, including W. J. Bryan. He stayed away to see that the platform builders did not slip any wet planks in. Newton D. Baker, was gone too. He was battling at the Waldorf for an unequivocal League of Nations plank—something that most of the delegates just as soon as soft pedaled here.

Arizona Finds Herself Popular.

A lively fight was on in the Arizona delegations as the convention got underway over whether Arizona would field to New York or to California when the roll of states is called for the presentation of candidates names. Both McAdoo and Smith managers want to get their man before the convention ahead of the other. They can't keep Underwood's name from going in first because of Alabama's leadership alphabetically. But the Smith people wanted to get in next by having Arizona yield to New York. McAdoo's Californians promptly raised objections and brought pressure to bear to have the state pass or else yield to California. A quarter of an hour past the scheduled opening time found only about sixty per cent of the delegates ready for business.

Garden Becomes Hotter.

The heat became more intense as the Garden slowly filled up. To let in a little air, the Garden managers stripped away a block of the bunting that ceilinged the huge building and threw open sky lights, but it only made things hotter for through these apertures came blistering shafts of June sunlight. It bathed the floor and platform.

Cordell Hull, chairman of the national committee, who has suffered two collapses in as many days from heat and overwork, attended today's session.

He sat quietly on the platform under his doctor orders and took little part in the proceedings.

Floor Resembled Mob Scene.

Sergeant at Arms Joe Hughes was having a tough time keeping people off the floor. Bewildered by the array of badges, ornate and officious looking, the New York cops were allowing everyone who looked important to stroll about at will, with the result that the aisles were choked and the floor looked more like a mob scene than an orderly, solemn convention.

Cops Secure Order.

At 11:32 Senator Harrison, temporary chairman, began pounding for order, despite the fact that many of the delegates were missing.

"Clear the aisles," ordered Harrison after vigorous rapping failed to make much impression. The cops got busy and finally after five minutes' effort some semblance of order was secured.

There were huge blocks of empty spaces in the delegates' sections and hundreds of reserved seats were likewise unoccupied.

The third balcony, up under the roof was packed. This was the unreserved section, where the rule of first come first served prevailed. They were within a few feet of the roof and suffered gamely.

Fan Hawker in Demand.

Just about the time Harrison succeeded in getting order, a hawker of fans appeared on the floor with his arms loaded and the order disappeared instantly as the perspiring delegates grabbed for them.

In the Oklahoma section which was being burned by the sun, a woman delegate raised a Japanese parasol and she immediately became the target of a flock of photographers.

The photographers were hustled off the floor by indignant sergeants at arms under Hughes' direction. "This convention is now going to start," finally yelled Harrison. He was becoming irritated.

Convention Gets Started.

Vigorous rapping and renewed activity on the part of the cops and the special officers finally cleared the aisles and Harrison then got the meeting under way by introducing Bishop Gallor of Tennessee, who pronounced the invocation.

Cheers for Woman Chairman.

When the bishop finished, Senator Harrison called to the platform Mrs. Le Roy Springs of Lancaster, S. C., to present the report of the committee on credentials.

Mrs. Springs was the only cool looking person in the humid Garden. She was dressed in white silk with a large black picture hat and she was sufficiently good looking to get a great hand from all the male delegates present. They stood up and cheered her.

She read her report in a clear voice with a pleasing southern accent. Only three contests were heard by the committee, affecting delegates in Minnesota, Oregon and Pennsylvania and the convention speedily ratified the action of the committee.

Convention Permanently Organized.

Judge T. H. Ball, of Houston, Texas, presented the report of the committee on permanent organization, recommending the selection of Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, and the cheers that greeted this left little doubt of the popularity of the famous oil investigator. The Montana delegation stood up and yelled and under this inspired leadership all delegates rose and gave the senator a real welcome.

Judge Ball got a cheer from the New York delegation when he proposed a woman for vice-chairman of the convention—Miss May Kennedy, of the Bronx. The convention unanimously agreed to it and with equal unanimity approved the whole report.

Senator Harrison then appointed a committee of four, Governor Trapp of Oklahoma; J. J. Sanders of Indiana; Senator Forrist of Michigan; and Mrs. Alice Campbell Good of New York, to escort Senator Walsh to the platform.

Walsh Gets Ovation.

Senator Walsh got another ovation as he took the gavel. "Three cheers for Walsh" yelled an Iowa delegate and they were given with a will.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said Harrison, "I present you a real Democrat and the greatest investigator in this country."

More cheers greeted this. Finally an enthusiastic Texan grabbed the Texas flag and started around the hall with it. In a twinkling there was a full fledged demonstration on for the gray-haired, slight oil prospector, in which every state banner in the floor was caught up and paraded.

Hot Weather Tires Members.

It looked like a real boom for Walsh—already considered by his friends as a dark horse candidate who will have considerable awaiting. The band struck up and gave the marchers something to keep time to. Senator Walsh called for a chair and seated himself on the rostrum and surveyed the scene with smiling interest. Kansas sent him up a bouquet of sunflowers.

The demonstration for Walsh appeared to lose some of its pep after it had been in progress for some minutes. It was soaming hot on the floor and perspiration flowed down the faces of the marchers.

They got hot finally and decided to call it off.

Walsh himself helped them by pounding his gavel. The marchers worked their way slowly back to their seats, the banners were returned and the convention got settled in its hard, hot seats to hear Senator Walsh chart the course of Democracy.

Walsh Held Attention.

The senator was the only man in the assembly who had on a frock coat. He had not been on the platform five minutes before he was perspiring generously down his high cheekbones.

Walsh spoke slowly and with great distinctness. He held their attention from the start.

To the Democrats he is the man who gave the party one of the issues upon which it will lay great stress in the platform and on the stump this campaign—the oil scandal.

Knew There Was One "Z" in Wizard

So Miriam Weinberger Won Contest to Represent Ulster County at State Spelling Bee at Syracuse.

During the past few months the elementary school children of Ulster county have been diligently studying in order to compete for the honor of representing the county in the state spelling bee to be held in Syracuse during the week of the state fair. In the beginning of June spelling matches were held in each town by the district superintendents for the purpose of selecting the best speller to represent the town in the county spelling match. This was held in the Kingston High School last Friday afternoon. Eighteen towns of the county were represented.

Superintendent M. J. Michael of this city pronounced the 100 words which he selected as among the most difficult in the list of words sent to the schools by the state education department.

Two of the candidates, Carol Gridley of Shady and Miriam Weinberger of Ellenville, spelled the one hundred words correctly. Superintendent Michael then selected twenty-five words which he gave to these two girls. This time Miriam Weinberger won as little Carol Gridley put two z's in wizard.

The winner from each county will be the guest of Dr. F. P. Graves, commissioner of education, and of Commissioner Berne A. Pyke, vice president of the state fair commission, during the two days at the fair. The first day will be given up to the spelling contest and the second day to sight seeing.

TRY THIS KIND OF A VACATION

Why not make this year's vacation a rest for your mind as well as your body?

You can't go away and enjoy yourself if you are constantly worrying about possible fire and burglary at home. Worry is a destroyer of health, happiness and contentment.

We recommend these two simple steps to insure you a worryless vacation:

First: Rent a safe deposit box (only $3.00 a year) in our modern new vault.

Second: Put your bonds, deeds, insurance policies, bank books and other valuables in your box.

Then go away for a vacation free from worry, secure in the knowledge that your valued possessions are safe.

Take our advice. TRY THIS KIND OF A VACATION.

Price of Milk
Varies in State

What consumers pay for milk, in comparison with the prices paid for the same milk by wholesale dealers, in nine New York state cities is shown in a report made public today by Commissioner Berne A. Pycke of the New York State Department of Farms and Markets. The study also includes three cities in Massachusetts and four cities in Pennsylvania. The average retail price in the seventeen cities during 1923 was 13 1/4 c per quart and the average spread between the wholesale and the retail price was 6 1/4 c, or 48.5 per cent of the consumers' dollar.

New York state cities included in this study are: New York, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Binghamton, Utica, Troy, and Schenectady. Of these, the lowest retail price was in Buffalo and the highest in New York city, while the lowest spread between wholesale and retail prices was in Rochester and the highest in Albany. The report also shows that the number of dealers per thousand population ranges from .06 in New York city to 1.35 in Troy and that it is smallest in the cities such as Rochester, Buffalo, Binghamton, and New York where sanitary requirements are most strict. It is also shown that in these four cities where extra sanitary requirements are in force, the average dealers' margin or spread is no greater than in cities where requirements are more lax.

Because of differences in size, character of population, etc., the report points out that the various cities studied are in some respects not strictly comparable and that the data given are intended merely to serve as the basis of further and more detailed studies to determine the reasons for some of the variations shown by this preliminary survey.

Says Oiled Roads
Were Covered

Complaint by Kingston Motorist Concerning Phoenicia-Pine Hill Road Brings Reply from State Highway Commissioner—New Paltz-Highland Road Slippery.

The appended letter is a reply from Arthur W. Brandt, commissioner of highways, to a communication sent by a local resident to Colonel Greene, about oiling conditions, in Ulster county:

Albany, N. Y., June 18, 1924.
Your letter of June 14, addressed to Colonel Greene and referring to oiling in Ulster county, has been turned over to this office for necessary action.

The description of the operations as outlined in your letter seemed to me to violate so greatly all rules of procedure in oiling operations that I immediately called up Division Engineer Howe at Poughkeepsie. Mr. Howe comes back with the astonishing statement, in view of your letter, that never has he seen an oiling operation so well planned and so well carried out as this particular one. As it happened, he was on the job at the time the oiling was being done.

He tells me that within a few hours after the oil was applied, it was thoroughly covered, not with stone chips but with sand and gravel which is considered far superior to stone chips as far as the convenience to the traffic that must use the road is concerned. Certainly, if 20 miles of road had been oiled and no cover had been applied, it would not have been possible for anyone to use the road. Every vehicle trying to use it would have found itself in the ditch as there is almost no traction on fresh tar which has not been covered.

I find it extremely difficult to reconcile the contents of your letter after Mr. Howe's explanation, and as Mr. Howe has been a maintenance engineer in this department for a great many years I have every confidence in his opinion of the efficiency of any operation being carried on in the department.

Yours very truly,
A. W. BRANDT,
Commissioner.

The road regarding which complaint was made to the highway department was the state highway extending from Phoenicia to Pine Hill. Although Commissioner Brandt's letter was dated June 18, The Freeman is reliably informed by a Kingston motorist other than the one who complained to the department, that on June 19 he found the same road extremely slippery, so slippery in fact that after proceeding a short distance he returned to Phoenicia. Another motorist informs The Freeman that he found a similar condition on Sunday, June 22.

Another road which is receiving the unfavorable comment of motorists because of its slippery condition is the New Paltz-Highland road. Apparently the road is without covering, but it is being used. The reason why vehicles using these roads are not found in the ditch is because motorists have been extremely careful in driving, the majority of them running in intermediate gears.

The amazing part of the above letter is the statement of Engineer Howe "that within a few hours after the oil was applied it was thoroughly covered."

Simple Way to Store
Your Furs for Summer

If you have no cedar chest for your furs, you can improvise one very nicely. Take any tight wooden container with a closely fitting cover, such as an old-fashioned trunk or hinged box. Scald this out thoroughly, and let dry in the open air. Now take some clean newspapers and a generous quantity of freshly made, cooked paste which contains borax or alum. A teaspoonful of either one to a pint of paste will be sufficient.

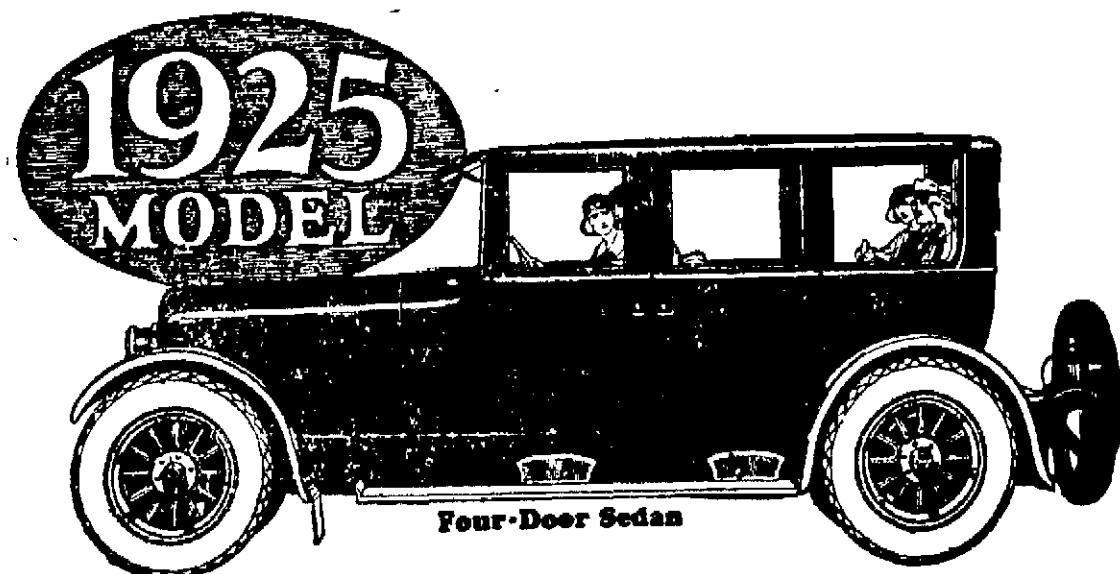

Line the box with the paper, fitting neatly at the corners, and leaving no edges to curl up. Leave open to dry. Get some cedar chips or shavings and put into a loose cheese cloth bag; or if you cannot get these, get some storekeeper to save for you his empty cedar cigar boxes. Break these up. Take out the nails and put in the bottom of your cedar chest.

Purchase an ounce of cedar oil at the drug store. Take a wide-mouthed bottle such as olives or pickles come in when bought from the grocery store. Fill the clean bottle with absorbent cotton. Pour in sufficient of the cedar oil to moisten the cotton lightly. Then cork with a clean, fresh pledget of cotton, and stand in one corner of the paper-lined box.

Lay your furs in carefully, being sure that each piece is clean and free from moths or dust, for if there are moth eggs present they will hatch out. Cover the furs and woollens with clean newspapers. Sprinkle a few drops of turpentine over the whole and close the cover tightly.

If you have only one or two pieces of fur to pack away, and have no provision for taking care of these, get a clean pasteboard suit box. You can get one of these in a good, heavy quality at a store or a tailoring establishment. Clean your furs. Lay into the box; sprinkle with powdered tobacco. Put the cover on the box and paste a strip of paper tightly over the opening. This will prevent any wandering insect crawling up under and feeding on your valuables.

When you want to use the articles in the fall all you have to do is to break the seal, shake out the furs and hang them in the open air for half a day.—Exchange.

Lace Hats Stylish for Afternoon or Evening

Lace has been borrowed by millinery designers from the afternoon and evening frocks of the season, says a fashion writer in the Cleveland News-Leader. Now the sheer patterned fabric is made into charming hats to wear at the mah-jongg or bridge party. Evening hats for restaurant wear are also shown with lace as their trimming. And many of these hats are fashioned of all-over lace.

One lovely model recently noted at a mah-jongg fete boasted a crown of fine henna-colored milan. The brim of the hat was made of cocoa-colored lace stretched over supports of fine silk wire. Directoire in effect, the back of the brim flared upward and gradually sloped toward the sides with a line of colorful posies.

Black lace is very popular in millinery. It is made, for example, into a lovely little afternoon bonnet, reminiscent of the cloche, with a snug crown of black satin; brim covered in black satin with bands of silver ribbon stitched in concentric rows on the under side. A length of black Spanish lace, wide enough to allow the scalloped edge to form a short veil, is draped over the crown and tied at one side. The lace floats off into two streamers, one longer than the other. Dried lace, to match the frock with

Striking Black Hats

Lovely black hats are a striking feature at the moment. They are rather large, made of tulle and lace, usually decorated with a few big vivid flowers.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

RADIO IS USED TO "TALK OF WAR WORK"

fact that a great many girls and women enlisted in the United States forces during the World war has escaped general attention. A fair was made at one time about the yeomanettes, but was soon forgotten.

Now comes Helen E. Bucking, commander of Women's Post No. 118, of the American Legion at Norfolk, Va., as the first woman veteran of the war to use the radio in telling what she and her compatriots did towards winning the war. The speech was delivered from station WTAR and resulted in a wide dissemination of knowledge concerning the part played in the war by the woman.

All the members of women's post served in the navy as yeowomen during the war, or as overseas nurses.
The post has made a distinct hit with the citizens of Norfolk because of its work in the hospitals. Commander Bucking declared, in her address.
Disabled ex-service men, needy veterans, hungry veterans—all find success at the women's post regardless of reasons. When other welfare agencies turn down the veteran, the women's post puts him on his feet—and has been doing this work for four years. Commander Bucking said.

Tuberculous veterans are indeed grateful to the women's post as being

Helen E. Bucking.

most instrumental in getting immediate care for them. Even the nurses and physicians in hospitals are enthusiastic in talking about the work done by the women's post which is one of the very, very few in existence in the country.

In the three government hospitals located at Norfolk were many men sufficiently active to make beautiful handmade goods. The women's post found this out and arranged to dispose of their goods. They rented a store, gardered the work from the three hospitals and made attractive their window displays. They spent money on advertising, talked to Rotarians, Kiwanians, Civilians and other bodies; used moving-picture slides and urged men to bring their wives, and women to bring their husbands to the exhibit and sale.
Folders were sent out. The newspapers gave much-needed publicity. And then it was that Commander Bucking got on the radio and broadcast a story of her post and what it was accomplishing for the disabled veteran.

More than five hundred articles were sold, a woman in Florida writing with a check to a friend asking her to buy something. In Wisconsin a woman did the same. The sale of disabled veteran products will become a regular feature of the women's post's activities. And Commander Bucking, whose photograph is reproduced, is entitled to the credit for the go-getting spirit that put the women's post in the forefront of activities for relief of disabled men.

Wisconsin Post Needs Just One More Member

American Legion officials in Burlington, Wis., are worried.
The annual membership drive went over to the satisfaction of the post—the members secured surpassed the membership of 1923. But when a revision of the roster was made the total was found one short of the quota expected of the post by department headquarters. Because the territory has been thoroughly combed for members, post officials believe that they may have to import a veteran to obtain the needed member.

Music for Post Ball

Vincent Lopez and the Hotel Pennsylvania orchestra recently furnished music for the dance of the Oneonta post of the American Legion in New York. Lopez had been making a number of appearances in the state, and agreed to play for the Legion men on the occasion of their annual ball.

INDORSES LEGION

THE Michigan department of the American Legion recently held a concentrated membership drive and called upon the governor of the state for an indorsing statement. Governor Groesbeck declared he was not only willing but eager to indorse an organization which he believed was one of the most constructive forces for good now at work in this country.

From my observation," said Governor Groesbeck, "the American Legion is a most worthy organization. It has accomplished much that is of benefit, and the longer it exists the more good I believe it will bring about.

It should not be a difficult matter for the organization to secure the application of every man entitled to a place on its rolls. Through a greater membership you will not only be able to better your own conditions but can be of much more assistance in every effort which has for its purpose a better and more patriotic citizenship."

LEGION BOY SCOUT TROOP MAKES GOOD

Possibilities of a troop of boy scouts, when sponsored by the American Legion are seen in the recent report of the Legion's troop in Collinsville, Okla.
During the past year the troop acquired a building of its own, through the generosity of one of the local church congregations and the boys, assisted by the Legion men placed this in shape, wiring, painting and redecorating and furnishing the building.

One of the principal activities of the troop was undertaking of a religious census of the entire city. This was prepared for use of the local churches.

The Legion maintains a free scout camp at Lake Euche, which is made the center for hikes and other activities. One of these hikes was a "father and son" hike, on which the scouts were hosts.

The troop is entirely interdenominational and closely resembles the make-up of the Legion in this respect. Eight Baptists, thirteen Methodists, eleven Presbyterians, eleven Christians, two Assembly of God, one Nazarine, and one Christian Scientist are in the troop.

Will Plant Wild Rice to Feed Game Birds

In order to provide a feeding place for migratory game birds, and for preservation of wholesome conditions in Beaver Dam lake, a large amount of wild rice will be planted in the lake by Wisconsin Legionnaires.

The rice is a great feed for wild ducks, and is said to restore healthful conditions wherever planted. Its planting will be made by a group of Legion men under supervision of state experts.

The Beaver Dam veterans take a great interest in the lake and its surroundings, hoping to keep it as a location for game fish, bird life and plant life. A few months ago, the Legion men seized the lake free of carp and rough fish, selling five carloads in eastern markets as a result of their efforts. Then the state game and fish conservation commission provided a carload of "rescue fish," mostly game fish, which were planted in the lake.

Veterans of Virginia Approve Registration

Success has attended efforts of Commander John J. Wicker and other Legionnaires in Virginia in securing registration of veterans in that state, that all might vote in regular elections.

This was made one of the principal objectives of the Legion during the past year, and according to reports from the state's posts furnished Commander Wicker, only a few members of the Legion have not availed themselves of the opportunity to exercise their right of franchise. At least eight posts of the state have qualified with every member as a voter. These are located in Strasburg, Louisa, Cape Charles, Smithfield, Berryville, Abingdon and Marion.

The work was under direction of a citizenship committee, headed by Allan
S. Clarke of Danville, and with members in every congressional district in the state.

Plan Georgia Convention

nual department convention of the the trick was never forgotten, the fishes always appearing on time dur-

CHERRIES

Some time before the cherry trees had been in bloom with their beautiful blossoms.

They had worn these costumes in honor of Mistress Springtime.

For you know how all of Mistress Springtime's friends want to dress their prettiest for her.

The trees all dress up so prettily and the flowers peep up above the ground and the birds sing and smooth their feathers and every one of them seems to be saying:

The Peaches Were Ripe.

"I've got on my best for you, Mistress Springtime, ah yes, my very best." But now the fruit was coming out upon the trees. And in some places it had come out earlier.

The apples were small but some of them were quite good.

Others, of course, weren't ripe and were not ready to be picked though if anyone wanted to feel a bit sick they would help make them feel that way.

The apples were always a little naughty before they were ripe and not so considerate of people as they might have been.

But then they always said that if people wanted them in such a hurry they must not expect the apples to behave their very best.

They weren't ready with their best behavior, they said.

The peaches were ripe and were so good. They were juicy and delicious and everyone was enjoying them.

But still little Maggie loved the cherries best of all.

She had cherries right on her own trees. There were some wild cherry trees, too, with rather bitter little cherries upon them, but these the robins ate.

Maggie was delighted to see the robins fill their little tummies upon the bitter cherries because she liked the others better.

There were almost as many pits around where Maggie was as there were around where the robins ate!

But the cherries were delicious. They were as juicy and tasty as could be and they liked to be at their very best.

They wanted to be enjoyed in their own cherry fashion and they were just as delicious as could be.

For when Maggie was asleep and when her family were asleep the cherries sang their little song of summer.

Maggie's family loved cherries, too, but not as Maggie did, so it was to Maggie the cherries on the cherry tree sang their song:

"Cherries, we are cherries, And we grow the best we can, We try to be our juiciest For robin, child and man."

"Cherries, we are cherries, We once were only flowers But that was long ago, Oh weeks, and days and hours."

"Cherries, we are cherries, To Maggie we sing this song, May she always love our sweetness, And for cherries may she long."

"When the spring is here may Maggie Say 'how nice 'twill surely be When cherries, cherries, cherries Really come upon the tree.'"

"Cherries, cherries, cherries, We're here for Maggie to eat And we'll say that Maggie's Appetite is certainly not to beat!"

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

Where fresh fish are obtainable the following dish will be enjoyed:

Fish Pudding.—Cook one cupful of rice in boiling water until tender, drain and pour through it enough cold water to separate the grains. Cook two pounds of pickerel, bass or other fresh fish, until well done, cooking by steam in a steamer or tie in a cloth and drop into boiling water. Flake the fish after removing all the bones and skin. Combine the rice and fish, add two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of fish stock and the same of milk. Season with two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, two tablespoonfuls of butter, using the seasonings between the layers of the fish and rice. Bake one-half hour and serve hot with drawn butter sauce.

Boiled Fish With Butter Sauce.—Drop the fish well-dressed, tied in a cheese cloth, into boiling water and cook at the simmering temperature until tender. Use onion, bay leaf or parsley in the simmering water. Drain the fish and serve with a rich white sauce to which the juice of a large lemon has been added and a tablespoonful of butter with salt and pepper as needed. Serve hot or cold with the fish.

Stuffed Fish.—For a three-pound fish, fry one minced onion with two ounces of diced bacon and a large tomato peeled and chopped. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of bread crumbs, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful of parsley, three tablespoonfuls of water to moisten the crumbs, or soak them and squeeze dry. Mix well and stuff the fish which has been well-salted and peppered inside and out. Sew up and bake, basting with butter and water during the baking.

Fish Salad.—To one cupful of cold, cooked fish add the same amount of chopped cabbage and celery, season well and serve with a good boiled dressing on lettuce. Salmon makes a delicious salad; add chopped pickle and a half-cupful of fresh grated coconut and the usual salad dressing; serve on head lettuce and garnish with white of egg cut into fancy shapes.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

MARY YATES.

Mary Yates was a celebrated actress whose maiden name was Graham. She was born about 1737, and made her theatrical debut in Dublin in 1752, but her performance was so poor that Mr. Sheridan the manager was glad to dissolve her engagement by a present. However, necessity urged her to another attempt, and in 1754 she appeared at Drury Lane, London, but was not over successful. On her marriage with Mr. Yates, under whose instruction her talents first developed, Mr. Garrick received her again at Drury Lane, and soon she became the first tragic actress of the day. She also excelled in comedy and her personal appearance was very attractive. Mrs. Yates retired from the stage in 1785, and died in London in 1787.

THE TRAGEDY OF MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.

Eighteen years ago today, on the roof of the great auditorium where the Democratic National Convention is now in session, Stanford White, the eminent architect, met his death by shooting at the hands of Harry Kendall Thaw. The many trials, escapes and escapades of the young Pittsburgh millionaire, the last of which, recently, resulted in his being declared sane and set at liberty, are only too familiar to the public. However, they were the most sensational in American criminal annals. No matter what opinion men held as to the dead architect's complicity in the events that led up to the fatal night, there was universal regret that so great an artist as Stanford White should be cut off in the midst of his brilliant career, and all over America today his monuments stand—that is, monuments to his artistic skill, in churches of all denominations, in statues, hotels and public buildings, the genius of the man is to be met with.

FIRST METHODIST CONFERENCE

The first Methodist Conference was held 180 years ago today June 25, 1744. This pioneer conference of what is now one of the world's greatest religious denominations, was called by John Wesley, who felt that a more definite and extensive organization than he had at first given his followers, was imperatively needed. The conference was composed of six clergymen, who proceeded to the consideration of three topics—what to teach—how to teach—what to do. The first two days were occupied with the discussion of several doctrines, evangelical and Arminian, which were defined with precision. Next they discussed the relation of the Methodist Society to the Established Church and a session from it was discontinued. In a conference held five years later, Methodism took organic and definite form, as Wesley's opinions on "church order" had undergone a great change. An annual conference was then instituted, and Methodism had henceforth its teachers, lay preachers, leaders, trustees and stewards. From that time forth Methodism began its gradual divergence from the Church of England, ending in a complete separation.

MRS. EIGHMEY TAUGHT SCHOOL IN LATE SIXTIES

Modern School Conventions Were Unknown at That Time.

Mrs. Margaret E. Eighthmey, who died at Willow, N. Y., on May 27, last, was born in Kortright, Delaware county, on September 8, 1846. She is survived by one son, Ralph, who lives at Willow, and by three nieces, Mrs. Jerry Mower of Roseton, N. Y.; Mrs. Granville Van Buren and Mrs. James E. Van Keuren, both of Kingston, and one nephew, Bryon Van Etten, also of Kingston.

Mrs. Eighthmey was one of the old time school teachers of this region. She received her education at the Stamford Collegiate Institute and began teaching in Ulster county in the late sixties. She taught at Lake Hill, Willow, which was then known as Little Shandaken or West Woodstock, Rosendale Plains and Stone Ridge.

At that time the canal from Honesdale to Kingston was running summers and closed in the winter. It was the custom to have a winter and a summer term. The boys who worked on the canal in the summer attended the winter school, so it was the usual custom to hire a girl for the summer school and a man for the winter term.

There was no system of written examinations for teachers then in the rural schools and the usual method was to hold a public meeting in a large hall and the candidates were sent to the board to work under the observation of the commissioner and the rest of the candidates. If they passed this ordeal satisfactorily, they were granted a certificate, unless they were held up by some personal whim of the commissioner. Mrs. Eighthmey had in her possession at the time of her death one of these old first grade certificates, issued by Dr. John B. Krom under date of January 14, 1867, and having on it a Civil War internal revenue stamp of five cents.

The average wages for teachers then was from 12 to 15 dollars a month. The teacher was supposed to board around during the summer term, generally staying two nights in a place. In the winter the board was hired by the district at the house of a farmer. Mrs. Eighthmey often told of many interesting experiences she had when boarding around. Many of the houses were merely log huts of one or two rooms but they always gave the "school ma'am" a warm welcome. She was often heard to remark that the knowledge obtained of human nature in this way was of great value.

Mrs. Eighthmey was married to Elias

No "static" with Socony

by The Veteran Motorist

THERE is nothing in the world so annoying to a good radio fan as static, and many are the efforts he makes, and the apologies he offers, to eliminate static. It cannot always be done. He must take what the air sends him, and do his best to tune in.

But motorists are under no necessity to endure "static" conditions with their motors. Lots of them do drift along, as it were, with balky engines, scored cylinders, and their crank cases full of a diluted lubricant, simply because they are too careless or too indifferent to know the remedy.

Furthermore, many of them just ask for a quart of oil. Others are penny-wise and pound-foolish, and attempt to save a few cents per gallon in buying at a low price; in the end they pay dearly for their indifference and their so-called economy. It costs real money to overhaul an engine that has gone "oil hungry."

No motor can function to its utmost efficiency unless it is fed the very best in motor oil, as well as in gasoline.

Socony Motor Oil is designed in various grades for all types of motors. It is sold specifically to give 100% service, and if properly renewed, the crank case drained approximately every 500 miles, there will be no stalling, no scoring—literally no "static." Don't accept a substitute.

For transmissions and differentials, use Socony Gear Compound or Socony Gear Oil. See the Socony Chart.

Oppose Traffic In Bus Permits

Public Service Commission Denies Application of Transportation Corporation to Lease Its Route in Sections—Municipalities Must Consent.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, June 25. (Special)—Action has been taken by the Public Service Commission on three applications involving bus permits issued originally to the Hudson Transit Corporation, which that corporation now seeks to assign or lease.

The original certificate granted by the commission March 28, 1923, gave the Hudson Transit Corporation right to operate a bus route from Newburgh to Nyack. The corporation seeks to assign that part of the route between Bear Mountain Park and Nyack to Armstrong & Higginson and lease the part between Newburgh and Bear Mountain Park to the Storm King Stage Corporation.

The commission has denied the application to lease part of the route. It has held up decision on assignment of the balance of the route until the consents of the municipalities concerned are obtained. In denying the request to lease part of the route the commission expressed its disapproval of trafficking in bus permits. The proposed agreement provided for a rental of $1,100 a year to be paid by the Storm King Corporation to the Hudson Transit Corporation. The agreement was made for a term of five years, with the right to a perpetual lease or assignment on payment of $12,500. The agreement covered only the bare right to operate over the route under the certificate, not including use or buses or any equipment.

Before the commission acts on the application for assignment it directs that the petitioning companies obtain and file before August 1 the consent of the city of Newburgh, the village of Cornwall, the town of Highlands and the village of Highland Falls. Each of these municipalities granted consent to the original certificate.

The commission also held up until the necessary consents are filed the application for the approval of a new operating agreement between the Hudson Transit Corporation and the Newburgh Public Service Corporation. The agreement seeks to grant to the Newburgh corporation right to operate jointly over certain designated portions of two routes for which certificates are held only by the Hudson Transit Corporation. The rights sought are to operate Newburgh-Orange Lake Park busses temporarily over the Cocheton turnpike from Newburgh to Lakeside Road, until the South Plank Road shall have been improved, and to operate between Newburgh and Walden, via the Cocheton turnpike, Scotts Corners and the Walden road until such time as the South Plank road between Newburgh and Walden via Orange Lake Park shall have been constructed or made possible for motor bus traffic.

FROCKS WITH YOUTHFUL CHARM

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

The much overworked term, "simplicity," which creeps into every fashion writer's report, is being qualified. One now reads, about elaborated simplicity, which seems to indicate more accurately the mode at present. Many a frock cannot come under this classification of simplicity although it may be simple in silhouette. As a matter of fact, there appears to be an alarming tendency of gowns becoming intricate. The reentry of lace is largely responsible for elaboration in effect, while, of course, the curious and unexpected turns and twists to which tucks are subjected, the use of cordings and of braiding, to say nothing of applique, make a sum total decidedly on the side of elaboration.

Midsummer collections reported from the great houses of Paris emphasize chiffons, both plain and printed. While bouffant skirts may not be of general interest, frocks have a delightful suggestion of youth, a quality associated with bouffancy; this results from the use of aprons and of overskirts of sorts.

The French are partial to combinations of organdie with taffeta, and organdie dresses of this genre—usually created for jeune filles types—have an outstanding, if not actually, bouffant skirt. Pastel colorings seem a natural choice and the elimination of sleeves an appropriate detail. The young girls may have a preference for the tubular silhouette and the omitted waistline, but the mature have no alternative.

TOY PISTOLS OF THIS YEAR ARE DANGEROUS

Small boys in this city and vicinity are anticipating Fourth of July by shooting off toy pistols that have all the appearance of revolvers. They are loaded with 22-calibre blank cartridges. The pistols are being sold by a number of storekeepers and meet with a ready sale. They are dangerous, especially when boys hold them close to the hands or faces of other boys, when firing, and lockjaw is liable to result from the powder marks. At East Kingston a small boy received on his cheek a wound from the explosion of a blank cartridge. The Rev. Thomas E. Larkin, rector of St. Colman's Church, got busy, gave the boy first aid and confiscated about a dozen of the pistols from school boys which he brought with two boxes of cartridges to the court house Tuesday and turned over to the sheriff.

Why Keep to Right

"Keep to the Right" is not an arbitrary ruling, but has scientific basis owing to the fact that the majority of individuals are right-handed and the right half of the body keeps a little forward in walking. It is natural to swing in that direction. The custom in many European cities of turning to the left is not considered logical by Americans.

Valuable Police Dog Lost.

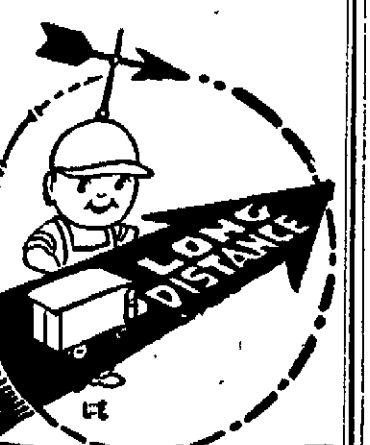

A valuable black and tan police dog owned by Mrs. E. E. Fessenden at 116 Fair street has been lost and is thought the dog may be caught in the woods along the Rosendale road as at the time the dog broke away from a kennel a short piece of chain was attached to the collar. This may have caught upon the brush and prevented the dog from returning home. The dog broke away Sunday from a kennel on the Rosendale road and was last seen coming toward Kingston. As the dog is a valuable one, every effort has been made to locate it. A reward of $10 is offered for the return of the dog to 116 Fair street or by communicating to Mrs. Fessenden by phone at 2170.

Unique Form for High School Commencement

Takes Character of Allegory in Which Fair Maidens Seek Aid of Knights to Overcome Evils and Oppression.

The Commencement exercises of the graduating class of 1924, Kingston High School, which packed the great auditorium to the doors Tuesday evening was one of the most unique and delightful affairs of its kind ever witnessed in any city. At its close there were many who congratulated Principal Van Ingen on his "First Graduation," at the Kingston high school, but Mr. Van Ingen modestly laid the praise at the door of Miss Noone and Miss Tarrant who planned the program.

On entering the auditorium of the building, one instantly surmised that something unusual was to take place. Instead of a background of scenery which has appeared for the other Commencement functions, the plain walls of the stage bore only seven large coats of arms of fearsome and resplendent design and symbolic in character, while the center front of the stage was occupied with a high ecclesiastical chair of state. There were chairs for the graduates and members of the board of education on the stage; and the front, along the footlights was a mass of flowers, baskets, bouquets, etc., which did look unusually beautiful.

The high school orchestra under the direction of Mr. Spaulding furnished pleasing music as the audience assembled, and then began "The Priests' March" from Athalia by Mendelssohn, as the class filed into the auditorium from the corridors and passed to the stage, all of the girls wearing white.

An especially inspiring invocation was pronounced by the Rev. F. W. Moot of the Congregational Church, after which Principal Van Ingen announced that the Commencement exercises would be in the character of an allegory in which fair maidens would be suppliants at the Court of King Arthur for aid to overcome evils and oppression in their several realms.

A trumpet sounded and again strains from the "Priests' March" there came upon the stage with slow and stately tread, twelve youthful knights in costumes appropriate to the days of King Arthur, each bearing aloft a banner with some heraldic device. These took their stand just in front of the graduating class, thus forming an immediate background for the setting of the program which while ancient in costume and conception was very modern in thought and appeal. Following this guard came four maidens fair, in royal costumes and with chastened mien. They in turn were followed by four knights in princely garments of the same historic period, and then the King in royal purple and gold, who took his seat upon the throne-like chair.

The entire program carried out the idea of having crying needs and wrongs of today presented by the maidens, each of whom begged for a challenging knight, and the challenges were accepted in the spirit of today. The idea was originated by Miss Noone and Miss Tarrant who trained the young people. But the King's charge to his knights; the maidens' appeals, and the knights' replies were all written as well as presented by the students taking each part. This took the place of the customary graduation essay and oration. The working-out of this plan showed plainly that there has been a remarkably unified ideal and tradition influencing the high school students, to bring about such results.

The four "Suppliants," at the Court of King Arthur were the four young ladies of the class who ranked highest in their studies and the four Knights were the four young men of equal ranking—who were chosen speakers as in former years.

King Arthur—Edwin Messinger, president of the class—called his court to carry on their service to mankind and if there were wrongs and evils and oppressions stalking through the world, to destroy those evils and avenge the weak, afflicted and suffering as true knights ever should. He then asked if there were any suppliants for help before him, and a fair maid in robe of blue satin and gold lace (Miss Goldie Kline) begged that the wrongs in her realm be redressed. Her realm had been the land of honesty and peace and harmony until invaded by dishonesty, a slippery, ugly monster winding his vicious length in and out among her people. She feelingly recited the open evils and the insinuating damage wrought by dishonesty in high places and low; seemingly no public office or private trust, no institution of learning or philanthropy or even religion quite escaping his poisoned darts. She begged for but one knight to strengthen the good and honest still remaining in her realm so that they might wage a victorious war against dishonesty.

The King called for an avenging knight but gave warning that he must be both fearless and careful, wise, tried and true. The challenge was taken up by a knight in green velvet doublet and hose, who, to prove his fitness for the task, told of his former encounters with Dishonesty wherein he had been all but overcome, and promised the valiant use of his good sword, "Truth," which alone could pierce the armor of fraud and shield of deceit.

The next suppliant to kneel before the King was the queen of the realm of the Ideal and the Invisible, (Miss Anna Gasool) clad in robes of crimson brocade and gold. She told of the awful scourge which had come upon her people, once honorable, intelligent, unselfish and pure of spirit, spread abroad by a creature of shrunken soul, but stout of body, boastful, proud and abominably unsympathetic. Materialism. This suppliant showed how widespread and insidious was this scourge which had all but depopulated her realm of the Ideal.

The knight who appeared in readiness to do battle with this scourge, was Hubert Brink whose gay trapplings did little justice to the fire of his zeal to wipe out this boastful evil, whose chief weapon was the power of suggestion, and whose brothers were Envy and Ostentation. When nearly overcome by this scourge in days gone by, this knight had suddenly found himself reenforced with spiritual fire and an almost superhuman arm, while his enemy grew weak before him and Materialism for the time seemed routed. He would continue the fight, enthused by the steady flame of spiritual beauty and Love, the greatest power on earth, and wearing the helmet of knowledge and the breastplate of faith.

The third suppliant—Miss Marie Rimm, in costume of yellow tinted satins and black with gold embroidery—made her plea in forceful verse. She pleaded for rescue from the wild beast, the strange monster, Lawlessness. She told of homes destroyed by him, of wise laws disobeyed, and often through the power of this monster, of laws disregarded by the very people who made them. She recited the grip of Lawlessness on old age and silly youth, who would kill and utterly destroy and torture for the sake of gratifying their curiosity as to their victims' sensations. Again she warned of Lawlessness in secret places, with results worse than death.

A knight in blue responded to this call to arms—Howard A. De Witt. He disclaimed any power of persuasive speech, but announced his readiness to do valiant battle against those who willfully break laws for their own personal gain, who go about terrorizing the land by creating evil laws of their own. The weapon he would use would be Enlightenment; teaching the children obedience to parents, their teachers, and spiritual advisers and a right regard for law. Their elders be would punish, but with leniency, where leniency could be understood and appreciated. To all he would teach justice, for where justice is, there Lawlessness must go forever.

Clad in queenly gown of gold and black brocade with yellow satin, bejeweled, Miss Meiba Simmons came before King Arthur with a fervid cry to release from the many-headed monster, Prejudice. Nor was this appeal alone for the land at large but especially for the release of her beautiful but imprisoned sister, Youth. Yet, while she sought so urgently for aid, she warned that the encounter with this monster would be fearful, perilous and requiring a heart of great bravery. She told of her once spacious realm of thought wherein Justice and she had walked in happiness and tolerance and where she had been accompanied by her sister Youth, so sweet, and true and pure. That sister had not died, but she had gone forever, dragged by this dragon with five fearful heads, into imprisonment.

His first head was called Religious Bigotry, wherein men of differing religious ideas and ideals were set each against the other, with Religion's God but little thought of. The second head was Race Narrowness, and the suppliant but wished for burning words to adequately describe the horror and loathsomeness of this face. Hatred Political was the third face which influenced bitter discords, madness and foul rancor among the nations of the earth and in our own land. The fourth head was nameless, but looking at it on one side, it seemed young but with a withering, scornful disregard of all that had gone before, and looked at from the other side, it seemed old and wrinkled and out of all sympathy with anything young or new. The fifth head seemed the most hideous of all, for among men it was called Caste Scorn and among women the green-eyed monster of jealousy. Caste could turn men into swines but could not harm their souls; but Caste Scorn could ruin both men's bodies and souls. There seemed no limit to the evil that Prejudice could effect. Even the queen's fair sister, Youth, had become besmirched with pitch, hating self and hating even her own sister. Again the suppliant begged that any knight think well before entering the lists against this insidious foe, for though he were to fight all ceaselessly, he would have to realize that his battle would never be fully won. It would be a task to stagger Hercules.

Yet one there was ready to enter the crusade against Prejudice—Milton Katz, a Knight in brown. He knew the task set before him, that Prejudice would never be entirely removed from the face of the earth, that the struggle would be fierce and long. Love of fellow-man was the only armor that could protect against this monster. The sword of honesty would be needed to strike off the head of Political Hatred undoubted, and this alone could make for the community of nations. He would use clarity of mind and thought, able to reconcile differences against the two-faced head. A white heart in every man would be the only successful weapon against Race Narrowness, and Religious Bigotry would never die until all the world should become united under one God. This Knight begged the privilege of freeing the suppliant's fair sister, Youth, and of beginning the long fight against the ugliest of monsters, Prejudice. His wish was granted.

Then calling his Knights before him, the King charged them as to their duties in redeeming a suffering and heart-sick world, and commanded them to kneel before him and renew their vows of Knighthood. It was an impressive sight to see the four youths, kneeling with swords held aloft before the King, as they recited their vow and were charged by that King to "Go forth to Victory, and God Speed," as they went on their modern search for the Holy Grail, the righting of wrong in the world.

After this splendidly given allegory, Principal Van Ingen announced that the next number on the program would be a song by the Senior Girls from the K. H. S. Glee Club and they sang admirably Mendelssohn's "Lift Thine Eyes," a song very appropriate to the spirit of the exercises. This was followed by a fine piano solo, Nocturne (for left hand alone) by Scriabine, played by Miss Gladys Raichle of the senior class.

Then came the awarding of prizes by the Superintendent of Schools,

Dr. M. J. Michael, which in many ways was as remarkable as the first part of the program.

Dr. Michael said that it was always a pleasure to award prizes, but it was an especial pleasure to award them when they had been well earned, and every prize had been so earned by the student who would receive it. The first prize would be of particular interest to the Alumni of the old Kingston Academy. The fund which makes possible a prize for the best work in English at the high school as a memorial to Nellie A. Wood, had grown to such proportions that it was now possible to give two prizes for excellence in English, and that, A History of Art, was awarded to Meiba Simmons. Dr. Michael at the close of the awarding of prizes said that he was about to make a most unusual announcement of awards, and that they were to a girl of no unusual talents; no special genius, but endowed by normal intelligence and the willingness to work, and that hard work had won for Anna Gasool, The Nellie A. Wood first prize in English—a money prize; the first prize in Latin, $5, given by Supt. Michael; the first prize for girls, $10, given by the K. H. S. Alumni Association; the Hon. George Washburn prize of $10 to the girl for highest standing in all subjects for the full four years' course; the H. F. Dunbar of $5 for science work; the Principal Buntin prize of $5 for highest record in mathematics; and the Eugene L. Resser prize of money for highest standing in modern languages.

Other prizes were awarded as follows:

Miss E. L. Turner, history, $5 in gold, Marie Rimm.

Mrs. Edward Cuykendall, home-making, $5 in gold, Beatrice Powley.

William C. DeWitt, mechanical arts, $5 in gold, Henry Millonig.

George Burgevin, art, $5 in gold, Frances Dederick.

The Hon. George Washburn, four years' work, $10 in gold: Girl, Anna Gasool; boy, Milton Katz.

Prisma Society, six prizes of $5 in gold each: Freshmen, girl, Alison Scott; boy, Francis Brownrigg; sophomore, girl, Helen Strickland; boy, Roland Green; Junior, girl, Beatrice Dodge; boy, Robert Herzog.

Alumni Association, fourth year work, $10 in gold each for boy and girl: Girl, Anna Gasool; boy, Richard Burgevin.

Kiwanis Club, $15 for first and second year work, Julia Cook; $25 third and fourth year work, Paul Coons.

Principal Van Ingen spoke briefly, reminding the graduates to remember their motto: "Before us lies the timber; let us build."

In awarding the diplomas, President Flemming congratulated the graduates, and recalled that at the baccalaureate sermon the preacher had stated that those diplomas would mark either their obituary or their commission in life. If intellectual growth were to stop with graduation exercises, it would be indeed an obituary, but he hoped that every graduate would take with him his or her commission, being able to fulfill the same with inspiration and

Walsh Urges Wilson Ideals

Permanent Chairman of Democratic National Convention Makes That His Keynote—Directs Criticism at Coolidge.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Madison Square Garden, New York, June 23.—Into a Democratic convention split in two discordant factions over platform issues and candidates, Senator Thomas J. Walsh injected today an eloquent plea for a unity of purpose that will "return us to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson."

He dealt gently and reverently with the late president, whose voice, had he lived, would have been a dominant one in this convention, and without pledging the party to membership in the League of Nations, he declared that if the Democrats were successful in November there would be immediate abandonment of that foolish antagonism to any world movement which he said had characterized the Republican administration.

"The honor of our country and prosperity of our people demand that we return to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson," said Senator Walsh, "that we resume the place he won for us—the moral leadership of the world. In the face of impending calamity the Republican party is impotent. It has ceased to be an organization through which the business of government can be carried on."

No greater opportunity has been afforded the Democratic party, Senator Walsh said as he took over the arduous chairmanship of the convention, and no graver duty has ever developed on the party than to throw out of control at Washington the "impotent, greedy and morally unfit" Republican regime and return to Wilsonian idealism.

Senator Walsh was the chief instigator and prosecutor of the oil scandal and he dwelt heavily upon it and the other scandals that gave Washington a succession of shocks during the winter. He laid at Republican doors responsibility for every unsavory incident revealed by these inquiries.

President Coolidge himself did not escape the general indictment, which Senator Walsh brought against Republicanism.

"The president himself," said Walsh, "has not hesitated to endeavor to shield the delinquents from the public odium to which their derelictions have subjected them. He has joined in the hue and cry the ability to do and think for themselves.

The commencement exercises of 1924 closed with the class singing two verses of "Alma Mater," and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Moot.

against the investigations that have been conducted under the authority of the senate and against that body for authorizing them."

He accused President Coolidge seeking by the weight of a presidential message to prevent an inquiry into one of his cabinet officers and went back into history to find parallel for it.

When the British House of Commons sought to investigate the private Duke of Buckingham, Charles wrote that body, "I will allow my servants to be questioned among you much less those as of eminent place and near to me."

"Charles lost his head," said Senator Walsh, "and Calvin Coolidge may profit politically by his example."

The tariff and agricultural relief were stressed as two of the leading issues of the campaign.

"I know how eager the managers of President Coolidge are to swing the issues from honest government, the repeal of tariff abominations, relief for agriculture and related forms to the League of Nations," Walsh went on.

"It is not so necessary that we immediately join the league as it is that we abandon foolish antagonism to any world movement, however commendable in itself, merely because it is in some way associated with the league."

He predicted Democratic success in November.

The devotions during the three days will be held in the chapel of the church, due to the renovation of the church edifice.

Joker Burns Cross

About 10 o'clock Tuesday evening somebody, evidently as a joke, erected a large cross on the highway overlooking the Strand and set it on fire, first firing off a revolver call attention to the burning cross. On account of hearing the revolver shots those who first saw the cross were afraid to investigate and so who started it.

Champion Leonard to Engage in Two Bouts

Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, will engage this year in two more ring engagements and then forsake the pugilistic profession for the screen and the stage, according to Billy Gibson, his manager. Negotiations for a match between Leonard and Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, are pending, after which Leonard will defend his lightweight crown against his former challenger, according to Gibson. Win, lose or draw in either bout, Leonard, he added, would hang up his gloves for good.

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU ARE STYMIED

Frequent Changes Confuse Many Golf Players.

While most golfers are aware that under the present rules stymies must be played, the changes made back and forth in the past few years have left confusion in the minds of many as to just what may be done where other player's ball lies in one's line, say a foot or less from the hole. Can you or can you not concede him his putt and knock his ball away?

This situation has various solutions depending on the form of match played. In a single match you must play the ball as they lie, that is, supposing your ball does not lie six inches or less from the other one. In that case you can have the other player lift. If the balls are more than six inches apart, you are not allowed to concede the putt. In medal play you can always have the other player lift, regardless of how close the two are together. In a three-ball or four-ball match you can have other player either lift or play at his option. If the ball is not lifted and you hit it, it must be replaced.

Suppose two players in starting in a tournament match mutually agree not to play stymies, but instead to lift the nearer ball wherever stymie occurs, is there anything in the rules to prevent their doing so?

Yes. Rules provide that in single match, ball farther from hole must be played first. If the two agree to suspend this rule they disqualify themselves.

Is there any rule to prevent player from conceding his opponent a putt after he himself has holed out? No.

Pitcher Vance Rescued Bernie Neis From Lake

Arthur (Daddy) Vance, pitcher for the Brooklyn Nationals, was almost a hero while the Dodgers were training in Florida.

In company with Bernie Neis, his wife, and Mrs. Vance, the four went into camp near Clearwater, Fla., on Saturday night with the intent to launch a fishing expedition early Sunday morning.

A tropical shower had rendered the lake turbulent before they set out. Undaunted, the fishermen kept fishing and Neis was landing what he thought was the biggest fish he had ever hooked in his long career as a nimrod, when the boat capsized.

Both landed in the water, Bernie underneath the boat. Vance swam to the rescue of his comrade and dragged him to safety. Vance puffed and blowed under the exercise. Neis started a profuse line of thanks but Vance cut him short.

"Gwan, forget it," said Daddy, as his feet hit mud. "The water is only up to your hips and just over my knees. Let's get back to fishing." They did.
